

NUSSLI is a leading, globally operating supplier of temporary structures for events, trade fairs and exhibitions. The past years have been marked by growth and internationalization. We are determined to continue along this course. We therefore seek personalities who want to contribute to a dynamic team of experts with their ideas and skills and are interested in growing together with us.

Project Manager for International Projects (m/f)

In this function, you accept the overall responsibility for projects in our divisions Events or Exhibitions. This includes comprehensive customer contact, project planning, purchasing, construction supervision, and budgeting, accounting, and actual costing. You enjoy preparing quotes, material lists, and the supervision of construction activities as much as you like leading the on-site assembly team.

Requirements for this challenging and interesting position include a degree in civil engineering or architecture. Several years' professional experience, an excellent track record in national and international projects, along with your excellent English language skills, round off your profile. You are a winning personality with strong conceptual skills who is interested in successfully carrying out complex assignments, dedicated, and loyal. With your professional attitude, your capacity for teamwork together with excellent communication skills and leadership qualities, you gain the trust and acceptance of both your internal and external business partners. You consider assignments that include travel and possibly longer periods abroad a desirable benefit.

We offer an extremely versatile position with a potential for growth in a dynamic and innovative company, whose success you can sustainably influence.

If you want to shape your professional future together with a strong partner, we look forward to receiving your complete written application documents.
